

In production processes parts must often be positioned into a specific place but a crane or robot for instance. Using two sensors and a controller it is possible to give feedback to the robot or crane to position the product in the desired location.

